

Video Games, Esports and Virtual Worlds as Ministry

Synopsis: The video games industry is now bigger than the music and film industry combined. Top Esports athletes are often more recognizable to young people than traditional athletes. Virtual worlds are fast becoming indistinguishable from real worlds. Our young people are being disciplined in these spaces, with or without the Church. How can we incarnate Christ in these spaces? How can we make the Gospel relevant to a generation that is native to digital spaces? What are the theological, practical and spiritual considerations we should consider as we seek to redeem these spaces for Jesus, and what can we learn from them? This course aims to examine these digital spaces from a Christian perspective and provide participants with the frameworks to do practical ministry in these areas.

A Theology of the Liturgy

Synopsis: The Christian liturgy is the most basic and comprehensive way of worshipping the triune God. Over the centuries it has evolved and assumed many forms, but there are certain “givens” which do not change because underlying the liturgy is the unchanging truth of God’s revelation. This course explains the basic theological givens or components in the liturgy. It seeks to show that liturgical worship is necessary if the people of God are to worship “in Spirit and in truth,” and that by participating faithfully in the liturgy, Christians are being formed holistically.
